Theme "Orai"

"Orai" is a Japanese word, meaning comings and goings, communication, and contact, as well as streets and traffic. About 180 years ago, a book titled Nagoya Orai was compiled and published in Nagoya and it was used as a kind of textbook for teaching and writing. Through arguments around art and its interdisciplinary studies, ISEA2002 NAGOYA[Orai] hopes to provide an opportunity to create a new text in this electronically networked society.

ISEA2002

- 1 "Orai" as a place of comings and goings of diverse arguments around electronic arts or media arts.
- 2 "Orai" as a crossroad of neighboring sciences, such as cognitive science, and for creating opportunities for interdisciplinary studies.
For example, the term "affordance" in cognitive science opens up another perspective in art and design. Tattoos or implants take a close-up of perception of human and its boundaries.
- 3 "Orai" as traffic between virtual and real worlds, as a place of experiment in a city.
In Japan, more than 60% of people access internet with their cellular phone. They are moving physically in real space and living electronically in virtual world at the same time.
- 4 "Orai" as an association between the Occident and Asia, and an opportunity to recognize cultural diversity.
The prime movers in electronic arts have been western countries; however, many exhibitions and institutions have been established in Japan since the late 80's in addition to animations and games which flourished independently.
ARTEC in Nagoya, ICC in Tokyo, IAMAS in Gifu, IMI in Osaka and so on have recently been established. Moreover, Sarai in India, Mediacity, Art Center-Nabi in Seoul, Korea. are also actively working with electronic arts.
- 5 "Orai" as communication among artists and public.
In comparison with Europe, contemporary arts are still not quite enmeshed in the community's normal routine. In the port area of Nagoya which is the location of the ISEA Symposium and Official Exhibition, a project called Artport has been working with various programs concerning contemporary art including exhibition, performance, concert, art cafes and children's art programs at the warehouse of the port.

Through discourse centered around art and its interdisciplinary studies, we hope to provide an opportunity to create a new text in this electronically networked society.
